

D'Matek Brand Architecture

Architecture reference — V1

Purpose

This document defines the current D'Matek business and brand architecture. It sits beneath the approved parent brand identity and provides the structural reference for future commercial, operational and brand decisions.

Parent Company

D'Matek Technology Limited

Positioning: A problem-solving company powered by technology.

Essence: The company you trust to figure it out.

Tagline: SOLVING WHAT MATTERS.

Internal mantra: WE'LL FIGURE IT OUT.

Technology is the means, not the identity. D'Matek solves meaningful problems through technology by building, integrating, operating and supplying technology.

Current Operating Architecture

Today D'Matek is one legal company with six operating businesses/divisions. Divisions may develop their own strategy, service catalogue, processes, targets and eventually P&L; responsibility while remaining part of one D'Matek customer experience.

Six divisions

- 01 — D'Matek Infrastructure — Infrastructure & Connectivity — Connect it.
- 02 — D'Matek Cloud — Cloud & Digital Infrastructure — Run it.
- 03 — D'Foundry — Software, Digital Products & Integration — Build it.
- 04 — IléMesh — Smart & Connected Systems / Connected Environments — Connect the physical world.
- 05 — Matek Emporium / Matek Provision — Technology Commerce, Distribution & Procurement — Source it.
- 06 — D'Matek Assurance — Advisory, Managed Services & Cybersecurity — Manage, protect & improve it.

Group Functions

Company-wide functions

- Strategy
- Finance
- Legal
- People / HR
- Brand & Communications
- Corporate Development
- Group Governance / Risk and other required corporate functions

Products & Ventures

Products sit under the division that creates or owns them unless there is a genuine reason for separate treatment.

QADPAY is a D'Matek-owned fintech product/venture associated with D'Foundry and may become standalone later.

A customer project does not automatically become a product or brand.

Product path

- Customer project → reusable solution → product → product business → venture → independent company.

Brand Architecture Model

Branded House with Selective Identity. D'Matek remains the master brand. Divisions are businesses within D'Matek, not six competing parent brands.

Parent-branded businesses

- D'Matek Infrastructure
- D'Matek Cloud
- D'Matek Assurance

Distinctive endorsed businesses

- D'Foundry
- IléMesh
- Matek Emporium / Matek Provision

Distinctive marks may exist where there is a genuine business reason, but remain visibly connected to D'Matek. A division logo does not automatically mean a separate legal entity.

Business Independence Rules

Rules

- Build businesses, not brands.
- Build brands only when the business needs a brand.
- A service does not automatically become a brand.
- A product does not automatically become a division.
- A division does not need to become a legal entity to operate like a business.
- Brand independence follows business independence.

Customer Architecture

One customer. Multiple specialist businesses. D'Matek is the front door; divisions collaborate behind the scenes. D'Matek sells outcomes, not divisions.

Example

- A hotel, school, hospital or enterprise project may combine Infrastructure, Cloud, IléMesh, Foundry, Commerce and Assurance.

Future Corporate Direction

As D'Matek businesses mature, the company may evolve toward a D'Matek Group / holding-company model with independent subsidiaries and ventures.

An operating division can move directly to a limited company when justified; there is no mandatory department → unit → division → company sequence.

Infrastructure and Cloud may eventually converge into a larger connectivity/digital infrastructure business, potentially developing toward D'Matek Networks. This is a future direction, not a current structural change.
